

Listening to the Teacher

In school, I listen to the teacher. I can listen when she reads a book. I can listen when she talks to the class. I can listen when she gives an instruction.

It makes the teacher happy when all children look at her and are quiet. When the teacher claps, I will look at my teacher, stop what I am doing, and be quiet. Children stop what they are doing because they are excited to hear what she is saying. If I talk to my friends, the teacher will be sad because I'm not paying attention to her. I can stop what I am doing and listen to the teacher.

When we are quiet, the teacher tells us what she wants us to do.

It makes the teacher very happy when the children do what she asks. I can do what the teacher asks me to do. I can walk quietly back to my desk and start my work. It makes my teacher and mum sad when I do not listen to the teacher. I can listen to the teacher and make her happy. I can be happy and do my work.

When I am in school, it is time for me to listen to the teacher. When I listen to the teacher, I learn. Learning is fun. I can listen to the teacher.
